J. W. A. Wright, connected with the San Francisco Mining and Scientific Press, furnishes that paper with the following interesting items relative to that beautiful lake:

The depth of Talice is very great. Until recently no deeper sounding had been made than some 1,600 feet, but Captain Laphan, commanding our steamer, informed us that Professor Le Conte's deepest sounding gave the immense depth of 2,700 feet, off Rubicon Point, a bold, preciptious cliff. It seems strange that, as your best passes over such a vase expanse of water, you may draw a bucket full from any point, and the water is perfectly clear and pure and deliciously cool. Dr. Blake recently showed, in a paper recently read before the San Francisco Academy of Sciences, that its surface temperature is 62 degrees, while at a depth of 560 feet it is about 39 degrees. The air is delightfully cool most of the 34 hours, the mercury indicating 76 degrees as usually the highest in July. The winters are often severely cold, but the lake never freezes, though the whole surrounding country is covered with deep snow.

It is a remarkable fact, whatever may be the cause, that the bodies of persons drowned there—and quite a number of such instances have occurred—have never been found. This is supposed to account in part for the superstitious awe with which the neighboring Indians regard this "Big Water." It is with the greatest difficulty that any of them can be pursuaded to go upon the lake in any kind of a boat. In a few instances, where they have been induced to go on board a steamboat, they have invariably thrown themselves on their faces and remained in that position until the voyage was ended. The reason they give for this terror is an Indian tradition, that many, many moons ago, when their ancestors first came to the lake, many of them tried to cross on rafts and boats, and never were seen or leard of afterwards.

To one looking out upon the usually placed furface of this grant lake, where a little steamer—or, occasionally a schooner's sails—may be seen on

HE WANTED SOME CANDY.-Editors Alta: Many years ago, when I was quite a boy. I was on Exchange street, Bangor Me. A man was standing by me, munching a piece of candy. A little boy, some four or five years younger than I was, stepped up to him and said, "Wont you give me a piece of that "Wont you give me a piece of that candy?"

Man—''What is your name?''
Boy—''Andrew Jackson Bryant.''
Man—''No, I wont give Andrew Jackson anything. Though that boy would now be about the age of our worthy Mayor, I suppose it could not have been him, for I under-stand he came from New Hampshire. EASTERN.

The ladies' shirt (shirt seems more modest than chemise) and drawers are made in one now, and the top is mad-bodice fashion, which combines three garments in one. There is no name yet for it, so I simply call it fly-leaf. This, with corsets and ruffle, called balage-ness, which is sewed at the bottom of the dress skirt, constitutes now the the dress skirt, constitutes now the whole under-clothing of the lovely crea-tures. The absence of petticonts or underskirts allows the dresses to assume that clinging style, the ultra mode at present, and the dress is of a soft thin fabric. Oh, my!
